Lisa Floyd used to listen to the story of how the Floyd family came to adopt her in 1963 every night. Her mother and father were desperate for a family so they turned to the Hampton Hall home for pregnant teens to help them find a baby girl. Little did they realize that the home, under a different name, had been on the radar of police for selling babies on the black market.

Learning Center Offers Children a “Bright Horizon”

Posted by Jonquil McDaniel on May 13th, 2011

by Jonquil McDaniel

When Cimone Edwards was pregnant with her first son, she didn't feel confident about putting him in day care. She was worried that if something bad happened he would not be able to tell her what was wrong. This is what initially gave her the idea for the Brighter Horizon Learning Center.
